Get a head start on your degree and earn credit while finishing your language studies!

The University of Saskatchewan Language Centre’s Bridging Classes (UB1 & UB2) offer an opportunity for students to take a three-credit unit course while continuing to improve language proficiency. The Bridging Classes earn credit toward degrees in Arts and Science, Edwards School of Business, and Engineering*. All undergraduate degrees require electives from many areas of study. Bridging classes count toward these electives.

The credit class accompanying UB1 is ANTH 111.3 One World Many Peoples Introduction to Cultural Anthropology, which looks at the development of culture and language around the world. The course will discuss what culture is, how it can change over time, and the things that cause culture to change. International students find this class particularly interesting as it helps explain their own language development and acclimatization to Canada. This class will be a mix of ESL students and native English speakers.

The credit class accompanying UB2 is SOC 112.3 Foundations in Sociology: Society, Structure and Process, which looks at the organization of society. Students will begin to understand inequality, power structures, and globalization. This class helps to explain why people act as they do. ESL students will be in a class with native English speakers.

Bridging students will also attend an ESL class (UB1 or UB2) to help develop the language and academic skills needed in the credit class and for future university studies. The Bridging instructor will attend the credit class with students to fully support their experience. This structure has been found to help new students be successful at university while speeding up language learning through increased motivation.
